

Ethics Officer

Ethics Team Description:

Running an analogue astronaut mission covers many different realms of expertise. From medicine, to science to astronaut training, all of this is encompassed by ethical protocols that Asclepios wishes to follow. The ethics team investigates a range of Asclepios activities such as the science experiments, medical procedures, and astronaut training exercises for ethical breaches or inconsistencies and helps with suggesting more ethical implementations of these activities and writing letters or recommendation / approval.

Ethics Officer Description:

As an ethics officer, you will work closely with the science, medical, mission assurance and astronaut team to ensure ethical procedures are followed. These teams may also reach out to the ethics team for help adjusting their activities to meet ethical standards. In particular, ethics officers will work closely with the science team to make suggestions for changes to their experiments to better align them with ethical standards and help write letters of recommendation to their institutions for ethical approval.
